

From the Editor's Desk

It has been two successful years of this journal serving as a vehicle for the delivery of timely and thoughtful information and recent research in the field of medical science.

Journal publishes original articles (Clinical trial, cohort studies, case-control studies, cross sectional surveys) as well as case reports, case series and also clinical techniques and methodologies.

Letters to editors, suggesting ways and means to improve the quality of journal are welcome.

Papers are welcome from all researchers in all medical field in which the novelty of the study has accurately been portrayed—ranging from the medical and clinical perspective to basic and experimental research.

I take this opportunity to encourage, the new generation of health professional to create and publish their new research work in our journal and adopt critical thinking and habits to take medical research to new heights.

Best Wishes....
